Melvin instructed Burroughs that it was within his power to stop the use of water in the packing house if he found that the source of water supply was contaminated or polluted by surroundings. Subsequently the water was used and beef was soaked in it for five hours, he said, although analysis of the water later showed its impurity. The city of Cumberland has expended a half million dollars since to better water conditions, Mr. Burroughs said. Mr. Burroughs said that he served for two years and a half at Cumberland.

Hogs Not Inspected.

At the Swift & Co. establishment in Cumberland, he said, he had refused the shipment of twenty-two hogs which bore no mark of having beer "United States inspected and passed." Under instructions from the department he went to Pittsburgh, the origin of the shipment, and appeared against Swift & Co. 'He said he had never been "able to find out what became of that case.' The packers in Philadelphia violate th law, he said. A part of the law requires that all portions of the packing house be pen day and night to inspectors. liam Morland & Sons denied him admitdesert plains 300 miles south of the tance to the "sweet pickle" room where the "cure" for hams and smoked meats American border between a force of is prepared, he said.
